My friend and I are at the amusement park with my family. We want to go on the roller coaster, but the rest of my family decides to go to a dolphin show. We make plans to meet at the front of the park around 7:00, when the park closes. After riding the roller coaster several times, we start to head toward the exit. It is only 6:45 so we decide to take the sky ride that ends up by the exit. We get on and are way up high above the park below, when suddenly the pulley stops. We just wait a few minutes because usually it just starts up again. When we realize that it isn't going to start again, we try to yell to the few scattered people below, but nobody hears us. We're stuck and it's past 7:00. The lights are going off and all the people have disappeared.

Exhausted, we sit down and start really getting scared. Then we notice...
